Inner Temple Marshalling Scheme

From the Treasurer

It is a great privilege for me to become the Inn's Treasurer. In my year in office I intend to do all that I can to ensure that a career at the Bar remains open to everyone, regardless of their background or parents' income.

The Inn already does much towards achieving that goal. We are justly proud of the outreach efforts of our Education & Training Department. The Inn plans to spend over £5m on educational activities in 2025, including over £2m on scholarships. Our Pegasus Access and Support Scheme (PASS) is widely praised for helping those underrepresented groups who might otherwise find the start to a career at the Bar too daunting to attempt. But as the cost of qualifying increases relentlessly every year, we can and must do more, individually and collectively, through our chambers, Specialist Bar Associations, and as an Inn.

Our Inn faces a number of major challenges in the coming year. The cost of running the Inn has increased dramatically since we reopened after Project Pegasus. We have made an operating loss in every financial year since then. This is not unexpected, but we will take longer than planned to return to the black. We urgently need to balance our budget, by increasing our income and reducing our costs, without compromising our vital educational work.

More seriously there are regulatory proposals that threaten to make practice at the Bar even more hazardous than at present, and which even threaten the Inn's own core purpose. These threats come in general and specific forms.

The general form is reflected in Professor Stephen Mayerson's Second Supplementary Report of the Independent Review of Legal Services Regulation, published last September. The Legal Services Act 2007 makes "protecting and promoting the public interest" a regulatory objective to be pursued by the Legal Services Board and approved regulators such as the Bar Standards Board (BSB). But Professor Mayerson argues that advancing that objective should also be a regulatory obligation of every individual lawyer, even at the expense of their clients' interests. This sounds laudable – but what would it mean in practice? Who is to judge what is in the public interest? Professor Mayerson's amorphous definition shows clearly how impractical this would be as a regulatory obligation, with penalties for its breach.

Moreover, imposing this as a professional standard would have a seriously chilling effect on access to justice. Transactional and defence lawyers would have to judge whether their client's instructions conformed to this vague "public interest" standard. Those concerned for reputations or by the regulatory threat would probably err on the side of caution. That would leave many clients unrepresented or poorly represented – a situation which a practical system of regulation should avoid.

More specifically to the Bar, the BSB has recently consulted on its proposal to place a positive obligation on barristers to "act in a way that advances equality, diversity, and inclusion" when providing legal services. Again, this sounds like an entirely worthy objective. The Inner Temple of course strongly supports the idea of advancing equality, diversity and inclusion, and constantly seeks practical ways of doing so. But how is the required "advancing" to be judged? What are members of the Bar to be required in practice to do? For example, if the number of members with protected characteristics in a set of chambers remains constant every year, would the whole set automatically breach their duty to "advance" diversity?

The BSB's proposals are of specific concern to the Inn, because they envisage a regulatory requirement for barristers to take reasonable steps to ensure that the premises from which they practice are "fully accessible" within five years from when the new rules come into force. The Inn has spent great efforts and large sums of money doing what it can to make its premises accessible. But many of the listed buildings in our estate cannot be made "fully accessible" – it is either physically impossible or we would never get permission to do the major re-building necessary. We rely on rents to fund our educational activities. Is it the BSB's intention indirectly to drive the Bar out of the Inns of Court and to end those activities?

In company with the other Inns and the Bar Council, we are doing our best to persuade the BSB to think again. Failing that, very regrettably, we may find ourselves in a major legal dispute with the Bar's regulator.

Enough of serious matters. Another objective for 2025 is to do my best to ensure the members of The Inner Temple gain as much enjoyment from their membership as we can reasonably provide.

I hope to make this a very musical year. The Inn and the Temple Music Foundation (TMF) are jointly staging the Prelude and Act III of Parsifal in Temple Church in early April, and Opera Holland Park will stage Trial by Jury in Hall at the start of July. Our Summer Party later that month will have a New Orleans theme. I am also collaborating with the internationally distinguished accompanist, Anna Tilbrook, to try to bring some high quality music to Grand Day and to some of our other social events throughout the year: and we are very fortunate that the Master of the King's Music, Errollyn Wallen CBE, has agreed to become our Honorary Bencher.

We very much hope to see her in the Inn (and to hear her enthralling music) at some point this year - all of this on top of the more regular musical delights provided by Temple Church and the TMF.

I cannot end without a heartfelt tribute to Michael Soole, Treasurer in 2024. Michael's has been a very assured hand guiding the Inn through the past year. He has been a thoroughly good-humoured and approachable Treasurer, someone that everyone – me, most especially – has relished working with. He will be a very hard act to follow.

Fortunately, I have two very able colleagues as Principal Officers this year: the Reader, Helen Davies (Treasurer, 2026); and the Reader-Elect, Juliet May (Treasurer, 2027). I greatly look forward to working with them, and with our excellent and hardworking staff, to offer all Inner Temple members a happy and successful year.

‘Movers & Returners’ Conference

Supporting barristers with planning breaks, returning and moving practice.

22 May 2025

There are many reasons for barristers taking a break from practice, including maternity leave, health matters or to focus on other interests. It is recognised that it can be particularly difficult to return to work after a longer break or if the individual has not maintained contact with their work environment or professional colleagues.

In 2022, the Bar Council reported that 26% of female and 10% of male self-employed barristers said they were primary carers. Data suggests a risk to talent retention at the Bar due to difficulties experienced by its members accessing support to return or transfer practice area. The Inner Temple is therefore supporting an initiative led by the Bar Council to signpost resources available to practitioners, develop further online resources and host interactive informative sessions during a one-day conference in 2025. By sharing guidance, resources and micro-mentoring support to delegates, the Inn aims to assist those planning career breaks, seeking to return to practice or considering moving practice area.

The free event is open to all. Further information on the programme and registration for the event will be found on innertemple.org.uk/returningtothebar

We are actively seeking trained mentors for the event to support our micro-mentoring networking sessions across employed and self-employed practice areas. If you would like to volunteer please contact David Miller.

Judges We Need You!

Inner Temple Marshalling Scheme 2025

The Marshalling Scheme affords student members of the Inn the opportunity to spend up to a week sitting with a judge in England or Wales. The experience will provide students with a unique opportunity to observe the workings of the court from an entirely different perspective.

The scheme is open to Inner Temple student members who are:

- Current Bar Course students.
- Yet to obtain pupillage but have completed the Bar Training Course.

We need judges from all areas of law, specifically civil, criminal, public and family in and outside of London.

To volunteer, please click here.

PASS

PASS is our flagship outreach scheme designed to improve access to the profession and to support high achieving aspiring barristers from under-represented backgrounds by providing experiences and developing skills that will support a career at the Bar. All PASS scholars attended non-fee paying schools and are at least an academic year away from starting the Bar Course.

On Saturday 26 October, we welcomed our new cohort of Pegasus Access and Support Scheme (PASS) scholars to the Inn. 67 scholars attended, receiving tours of our Treasury Building from practising barristers and judges while hearing about their professional lives. Scholars engaged in an informal advocacy session, where five Inn-accredited advocacy trainers spoke about what skills inform strong advocacy before giving students the chance to pair up and try an advocacy exercise.

Scholars also heard from members of the Inn about their varied journeys to the Bar as well as receiving first hand advice about succeeding in the scholarship and pupillage application process.

Our Insight Afternoon for aspiring barristers was also held on Saturday 26 October at the Inn, with a total of 125 attendees in addition to our PASS scholars hearing from panels of barristers and judges.

A total of 22 members gave up their Saturday to support these events and we are so grateful for their time and the insights they provided.

If you are in practice and want to assist at our events for aspiring barristers, please contact outreach@innertemple.org.uk

INNER TEMPLE LIBRARY

SPONSOR A BOOK SCHEME

INTRODUCING THE SCHEME

Our Sponsor a Book initiative aims to support the ongoing conservation needs of our special collections. Conservation work safeguards the historical, cultural, and legal heritage these contain, whilst also fostering user engagement in an often-overlooked area of our collections.

By becoming a sponsor, you will directly contribute to the preservation of the diverse, and sometimes unique items that make up The Inner Temple Library special collections.

CONSERVING OUR HERITAGE

Book conservation will be carried out by accredited off site conservators and costs can range from a few hundred pounds for a simple clean and repair, up to £2000 or more for those items in much poorer condition.

As a sponsor, you can donate an amount of your choosing that will contribute directly to ongoing book conservation works. Alternatively, if you wish to sponsor the full cost of conservation for a specific item you can select from an item in this pamphlet or discuss alternative options with the Librarian.

To learn more about the scheme and particular items in need of conservation, view the brochure or email Rob Hodgson, Librarian and Keeper of Manuscripts at rhodgson@innertemple.org.uk.

To sponsor the full cost of conservation for a specific item, please email the Librarian at rhodgson@innertemple.org.uk.

AI and Legal Research

Sally McLaren, Assistant Librarian

Unless you've been completely off-grid for the past 12 months or so, you've likely encountered the deluge of news, articles, explainers, and enthusiastic LinkedIn posts about the wonders and/or terrors of generative AI.

If you have been offline and missed it all, then congratulations! It's been a lot! This bit is for you. The AI savvy/weary may skip ahead:

The term 'artificial intelligence' (AI) has been in use since the 1950s and refers to the simulation of human intelligence in machines, enabling them to perform tasks that typically require human-like understanding, reasoning, learning, and problem solving.

Generative AI (Gen AI) is a type of AI that can create or generate content, such as text, images, or other data, by learning from large datasets and producing novel outputs based on observed patterns. Popular examples include: ChatGPT, Claude, and Gemini.

There are probably as many Gen AI evangelists as there are prophets of doom, but in between the two camps is a DMZ populated by many more wary adopters, curious sceptics and AI casuals. It is increasingly unrealistic to think that students, pupils, barristers, or indeed law librarians, won't be using Gen AI – quite the opposite.

Leveraging these new tools is fast becoming a marketable skill. However, as useful as Gen AI can be, there is a significant degree of risk attached to employing it in your studies and practice.

Minimising the Risks

Here are eight tips to help minimise the risks associated with using Gen AI:

1. Conduct your due diligence. With the proliferation of Gen AI tools, some are bound to be (to use the correct InfoSec terminology) 'really dodgy'. Research who or what is behind your chosen application. Is it well established or a new kid on the block? What are other people saying about it?

2. What training data does your chosen model use? For example, ChatGPT's training data includes everything publicly available on the internet, from peer-reviewed articles to Reddit threads(!), while Lexis+ AI relies on Lexis+ content.

3. Read the small print and adjust privacy settings where possible.

Understand the terms of use. Will your data be reused? Could your input end up in someone else's output? Can you opt out of model training?

4. Avoid inputting sensitive data and comply with data protection laws and best practice. Don't input third-party content without consent.

5. Cross-examine your model. Remember, Gen AI isn't actually intelligent. 'Prompt engineering' is the art of carefully crafting your questions. Contextualise and refine your instructions to improve the relevance of the output. Try telling your model that it is a lawyer.

6. Interrogate the output. Check facts and follow up leads using alternative sources. Gen AI presents us with the 'black box' problem, meaning you don't necessarily know how it has arrived at its answer. It also has a tendency to 'hallucinate' or make things up, even inventing fake references and case citations. Always double check the accuracy and currency of the output and be on the lookout for potential biases.

7. Disclose and be transparent about using AI generated content. Avoid simply copying and pasting. If you do, use footnotes to indicate this.

8. Maintaining high ethical standards is crucial for professional and academic integrity. Read the relevant guidance published by professional bodies such as the Bar Council and course providers' statements on the use of Gen AI.

Gen AI is just another tool to be leveraged, albeit carefully. Investing time in mastering this new skill and learning more about risks and effective use is key. Explore a curated list of online courses, many of which are free, here.

Garden

Gardener's Cuttings

Sean Harkin, Head Gardener

Happy New Gardening Year

One of the special elements of the Garden is our ethos of experimentation and the desire to try new things. This is a sensitive process with the aim to build on previous successes and ensure any new experiments fit with the Garden's sense of place. For the gardeners, the new year really begins back in the autumn when we start planting what we have designed for the following year. To inform our design, we take monthly photos of all the borders, creating a visual record of how the borders look throughout the year, alongside regularly making notes to capture our observations.

Digitalis 'Camelot Rose'

This Year's Experiments...

This year we have experimented with the colour palette in the high borders and top meadow for early summer. Traditionally, this time of year has been dominated by pastel shades, whereas this year there are new additions to create a richer colour palette. A deep-pink foxglove named Digitalis 'Camelot Rose' has been chosen for the high border to pick up the stunning colour of Rosa 'Corvedale', one of our favourite roses in the meadow opposite.

A new Iris called 'Dusky Challenger' has been selected by Deputy Head Gardener, Sophie, also for the high border. A tall, bearded Iris with inky, almost black-purple

As the year unfolds, the garden team will once again capture in notes and photographs the successes and ideas for what to try differently the following year to ensure the Garden keeps a vitality and freshness. We hope you enjoy this year's experiments.

Treasurer's Visit to Washington, DC

(L-R) Sub-Treasurer, Alison Dorey, Treasurer, Master Barbara Lynn, Master Bill Koch, Master Tom Leighton

Greg Dorey, Sub-Treasurer

The Treasurer visited Washington from 24-28 October, accompanied by the Sub-Treasurer. Master Karen Pierce, the British Ambassador to Washington, kindly hosted afternoon tea on the first day at the beautiful Lutyens Residence – a good opportunity to discuss future collaboration.

The remainder of the time in Washington was spent with the American Inns of Court (AIC), who model themselves consciously on the English Inns of Court and are annual visitors to London. There are now some 350 Inns in 48 States and abroad, with over 30,000 active members. A reception with their Board of Trustees on the first evening was followed by their awards ceremony and dinner at the Supreme Court, all of which were good opportunities to compare notes with Masters Barbara Lynn (the former AIC President), Bill Koch (a former AIC President and Dean of the Nashville Law School), Tom Leighton (of Thomson Reuter) and Kannon Shanmugam (a Supreme Court advocate) and to make new connections. Master Jo Korner, who had been delivering advocacy training to the AIC and Jonathan Schaffer-Goddard were also present. The following day, the Treasurer hosted brunch for key contacts and AIC staff.

The Geoffrey Nice Foundation: Call for New Faculty Members

Geoffrey Nice, Chair GNF

The Geoffrey Nice Foundation (GNF) deals with Law History, Politics, and Society in the Context of Mass Atrocities. For the past 11 years, it has run masterclasses, usually in Dubrovnik. The faculty are often very senior, and all give their time pro bono (with travel and accommodation costs covered by the GNF). They hail from the widest possible range of disciplines and have numbered several members of The Inner Temple, including Sir Konrad Schiemann, HE Joanna Korner, Lord Iain Bonyon, Rodney Dixon KC, Andrew Cayley KC and Aarif Abraham.

The GNF is now looking to widen its available pool of faculty members from The Inner Temple – barristers and judges (preferably mid-career or senior) who may, if inclined, be available to take part in GNF activities for some years to come.

The masterclasses are six long concentrated days (9am – 7/8pm) within one week. Travel for students is either Saturday to Saturday or Sunday to Sunday. Faculty members making presentations on one day generally stay two or three nights, giving them an opportunity to spend time with those leading the masterclasses and with students.

The original focus of the GNF was to allow students from parts of the Former Yugoslavia to discuss the wars of the 1990s that concerned them, along with other conflicts. There are always students from many parts of the Western Balkans present. Other students typically came from The Netherlands, but as time passed, they have come from all over the world. The Inner Temple has also supported and funded the attendance of junior barristers or pupils, now six, per year.

It is clear, not least from a recent survey of those attending, that the masterclasses have had real value for students and faculty. Presentations by faculty tend to be free-thinking (or even radical) and focus on institutions and events that are often accepted without criticism. What is critical to the GNF approach is that students and faculty leave with positive ideas about dealing with the dangers around us.

Presently, not just in the GNF masterclasses, interactive dynamic presentations are expected of most faculty. Largely gone are the days of the uninterrupted lecture with a Q&A at the end. It is especially important for long GNF days that those presenting are excellent communicators who engage and interact with students.

Programmes of past years have often had days focused on particular case studies: the Balkans, North Korea, and Russia-Ukraine etc. This year, it may be better to have a number of case studies available for pre-reading before the discussion, but for the masterclass to focus on big central issues, such as why we go to war at all, perhaps viewed through, historic philosophical views, pacifism, and nuclear deterrence.

Over recent years, we have moved from just considering post-conflict accountability processes (war crimes trials and similar) to examining earlier stages in conflicts. For 2025, the provisional title suggests a fundamental quest about going to war and whether the law has any potential to stop wars: Why Go to War: What if Any Law Can Stop Us.

As regular faculty members have aged we intend to ensure their wisdom remains central to masterclasses but with younger, new faculty members beside them. If you feel you could contribute on the big central issues, or any particular case study (not just the samples listed above), within the overall theme of the title, please let us know.

Please reply both to Jennie Collis Price, Head of the Sub-Treasurer's Office, at jcollisprice@innertemple.org.uk and Anastasia Kucher, part time Director of GNF, at geoffreynicefoundation@gmail.com.

Temple Music

WINTER 2025

We are delighted to unveil our programme of concerts for next term at the Temple. Tickets are now on sale, and we look forward to welcoming you to any of the events in this beautiful place:

Thu 16 Jan | 6.30pm - 10pm
£125 | Inner Temple Hall

Solomon

Knockout choruses, unforgettable arias, and some of Handel's most wonderful music. To perform this magnificent work, we welcome the Gabrieli Consort & Players and an all-star cast, including countertenor Tim Mead in the title role and soprano Anna Dennis as the Queen of Sheba.

Thu 30 Jan | 7.30pm - 9.30pm
£5 - £45 | Temple Church

The Prince of Music

Stile Antico mark the quincentenary of Palestrina in a lavish programme, including some of the composer's most beloved and timeless motets.
